

The following exterior features of the Anna Bader Kespohl House, 1632 York Street, are among those protected by City Ordinance No. 9284 approved December 8, 2015:

1. Two-story Prairie style house with Tudor Revival details on a limestone foundation.
2. First-story walls faced with elongated, buff-colored Roman brick; second story walls faced with stucco and false half-timbering.
3. One-story semi-hexagonal bay window on east façade with zipper-brick corners and two classical brackets under overhand. All other windows on original house.
4. Two-story squared bump-out centered on west façade.
5. Full-width one-story front porch with square brick and wooden supports.
6. Original front door and storm door, each with beveled glass lights.
7. Shallow one-story squared bay east of front entry.
8. Arched lintels with brickwork in keystone pattern over-full length windows on first story.
9. Wood belt course at junction of brick and stucco wall facings.
10. Soldier brick stringcourse at sill level of full-length windows of first story.
11. Hipped roof with flared eaves.
12. Four through-the-roof dormers with clapboard siding, each with hipped roof brackets under eaves.
13. Two tall brick chimneys with corbelling at the tops. Decorative chimney pots on east chimney.
14. Stylistically sympathetic addition and porch at rear.
15. Detached two-car garage at rear.
